Sheridan, our commander, as the battle of Opequan, to distinguish it from previous contests around Winchester, restored the lower Valley of Virginia to Union control, from which it was never again wrested; it permanently relieved Maryland and Pennsylvania from the periodical invasions to which they had been subjected during three years, and the national capitol from further humiliations. This result had been accomplished by a battle, which, taken with its sequences inflicted upon the Confederate forces, losses in troops nearly as great as those which were sustained by the Union arms an experience fatal to the fast dwindling forces of the South. The moral effect of this victory on the North was most wholesome. The discouragement which had prevailed regarding operations in the Shenandoah Valley since the year 1861 wholly disappeared. The magnetism Sheridan exercised upon his troops spread through the country, and henceforth caused his...
