This whole group, through style, versmovement, and disorganization of stanza, reveals interesting affiliations with the so-called Co, and with certain plays of W. In Y VIII the stanza is equivalent to the pedes of IX. It would be nothing surprising if an author who was experimenting with the cauda of his favorite stanza should try the experiment of dropping it altogether. The York cycle, however, contains another play in this double quatrain measure, play XXXIX, for the second stanza of which the following scheme can be formed--This scheme is very different from that of XXVI. The versmovement and alliteration agree well with those of VIII and IX, but the language seems of a later date. It is well to remember that this was a favorite stanza for the fouraccent Verse that sprang from the iambic tetrameter of the Latin, and was widely cultivated in Southern England through French influence. In this verse alliteration was never structural, but, especially on the borders of the Northern district, simulated structural alliteration so closely at times, that other tests must be relied upon to detect the affiliations of the verse. In this case the tests will be those that would reveal a common authorship. i See p. 240. - See p. 242. - See p. 242. See p. 251. In the poems of this stanza the riming series and the riming words are important indications of authorship. In each typical stanza there must be four rimes,...
