Excerpt: . . . business to coal, have put forth efforts to hold it, and have been very successful in substituting gas kitchens for coal kitchens in many homes. While this is a step in the right direction, it is only a step and if we are to get the maximum of the winter cooking load we have got to replace the coal stove more rapidly. The writer believes that the way to do this is to offer, in houses not heated by furnaces, a type of range which is so constructed that it will heat the water, do all the cooking and furnish ample heat at seasons when the heat is necessary, at a total cost which will compare favorably with the cost of operating a coal range. Gas men should approach this problem with an open mind. Although the writer believes that the gas kitchen is the ideal kitchen, he recognizes that there are thousands of homes where a gas kitchen is not the practical kitchen. Why, therefore, continue to lose the winter cooking sales in these homes by holding to an ideal Why not sell these families a type of range that will, by merit alone, win the cooking for gas By adopting such a policy we can sell much more gas in winter, and in the late fall and early spring as well. In fact, we can improve our sales for all year round by placing at the disposal of these families a complete...
